Ardèche, France

Ardèche offers almost all you could possibly ask for on a rock climbing vacation. Tumbling down the mountain, the turbulent river Ardèche has carved narrow gorges into the valley. Thereby creating one of the most beautiful canyons in France.

We have picked six crags in Ardèche, three of them established as the most popular rock climbing crags in the area, and three that offer that special atmosphere. They are; Les Actinidias, Chaulet, Cirque des Chauzon, Les Branches, Audon and Les Barasses. Together they offer more than 700 climbing routes.

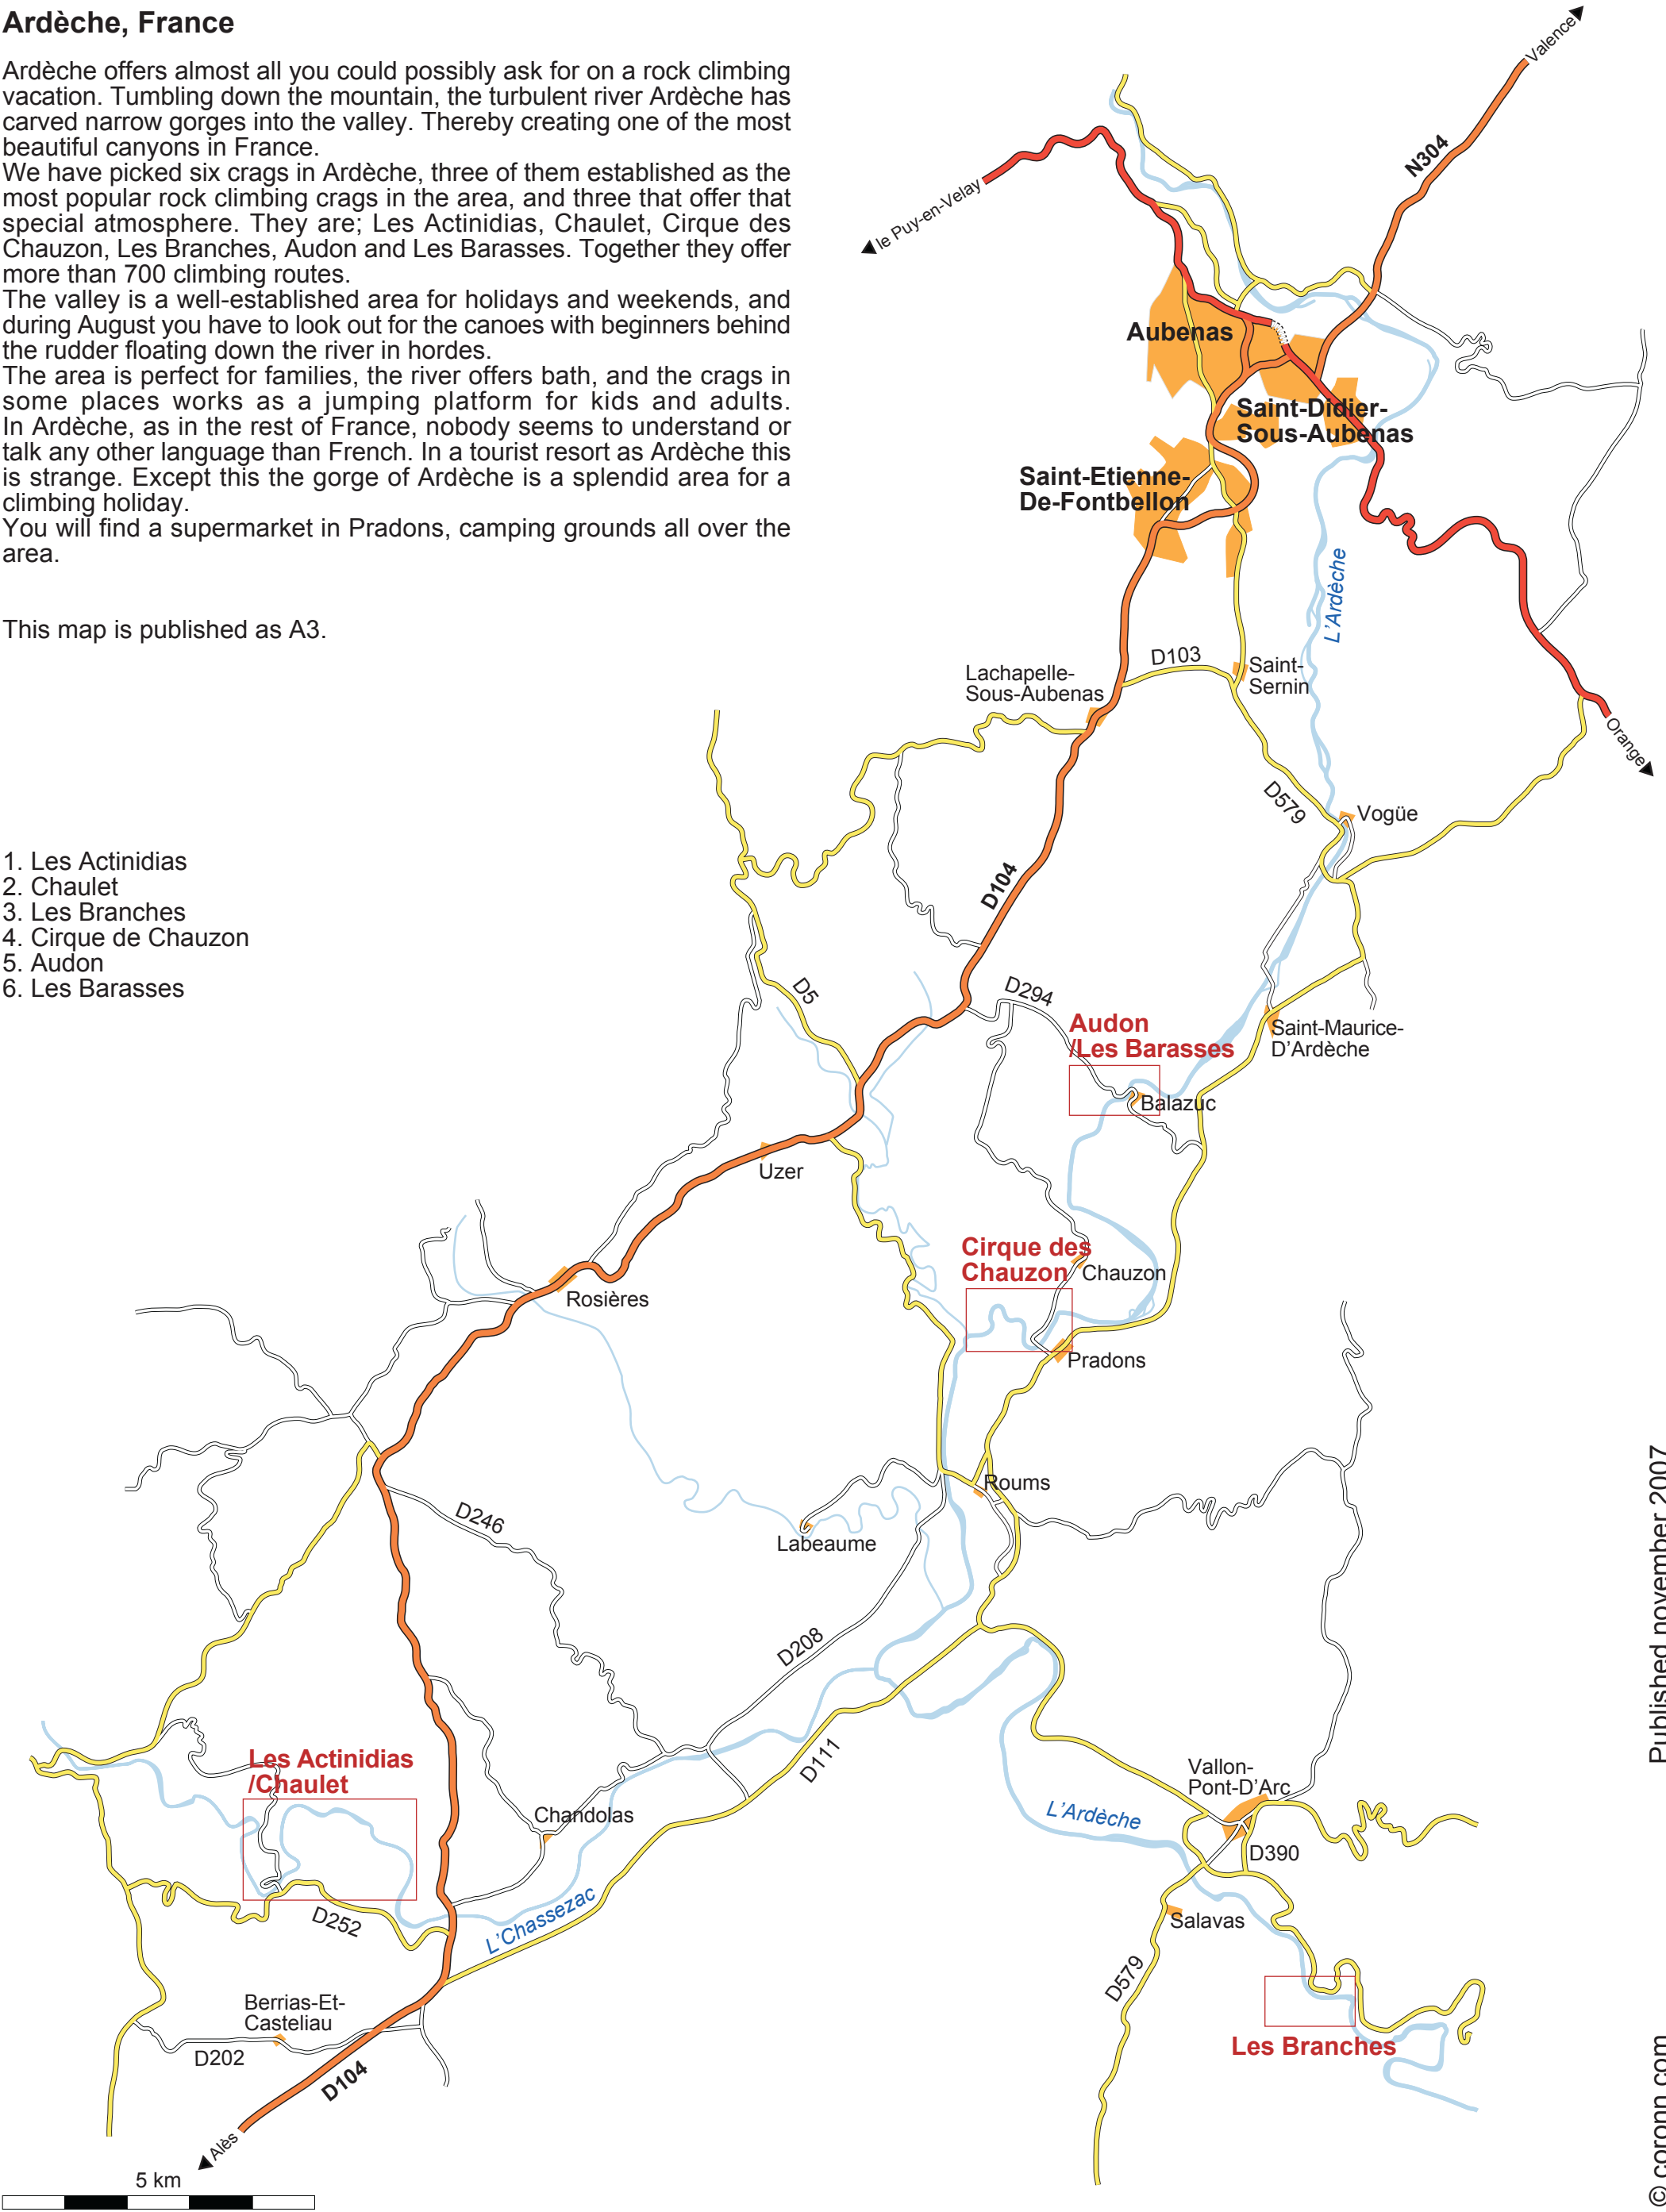

The valley is a well-established area for holidays and weekends, and during August you have to look out for the canoes with beginners behind the rudder floating down the river in hordes.

The area is perfect for families, the river offers bath, and the crags in some places works as a jumping platform for kids and adults. In Ardèche, as in the rest of France, nobody seems to understand or talk any other language than French. In a tourist resort as Ardèche this is strange. Except this the gorge of Ardèche is a splendid area for a climbing holiday.

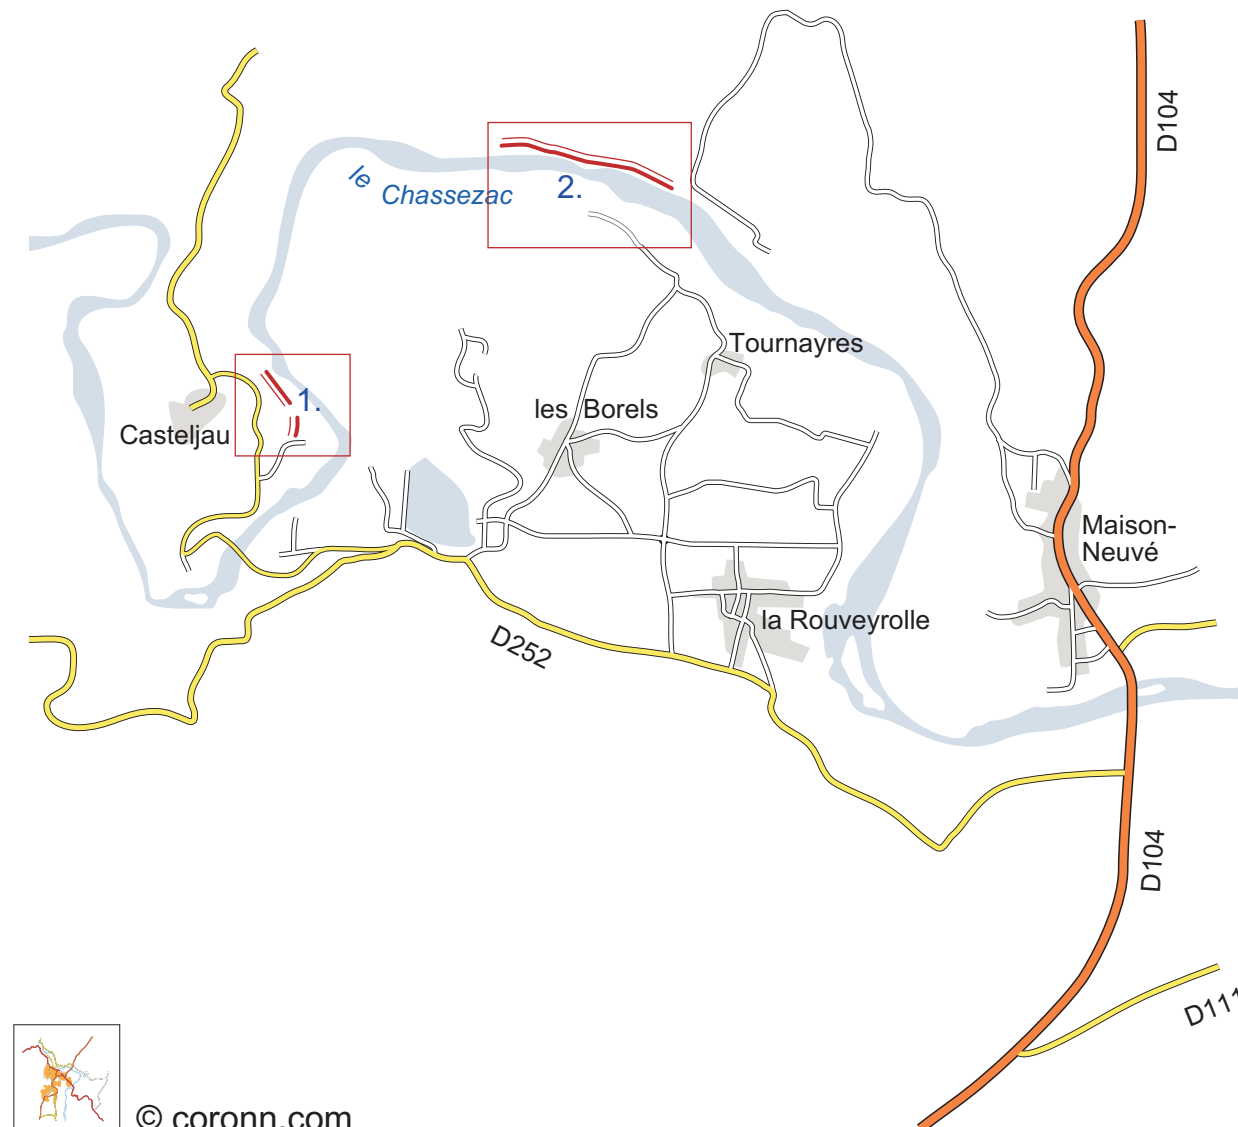

You will find a supermarket in Pradons, camping grounds all over the area.

This map is published as A3.

How to find the crag:

Les Branches is mainly a big open cave, overhanging and hard and with extravagant climbing. The access is quite long (for Ardèche), about 15 minutes on a track that passes over the river on a easy "Via Ferrata". Drive from Vallon Pont d'Arc in the direction of Salavas/Barjac, pass Salavas and at the outskirts, turn left in the direction of la Lauze. Continue on this road until it ends, you will find a big car park just before the Camping. Walk down to the beach and continue on the track that leads down parallel to Ardèche.

We had some difficulty to classify the routes from 24 to 31, we hope that it is correct.

4. Cirque de Chauzon

How to find the crag:

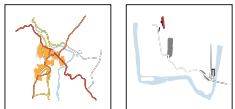

Cirque de Chauzon is one of the crags in the area that is known all over Europe for nice climbing, plenty of routes (more than 300), beautiful landscape and with plenty of activities for resting days. l'Ardèche splits the landscape and the circle shaped crag is easy to reach. Coming from north, from Aubenas/Vogüé, drive through Pradons. At the outskirts, just by a super market, turn right and continue over l'Ardèche on a small bridge. Continue straight forward. If you care about your car, park, if not, continue to the big car park on top of the hill. Walk down the very steep road and turn right on a track that leads to the crag. Gorges de l'Ardèche is a tourist area and you will find camping grounds near the crag. If you bring the car, make sure to take out everything before you leave it (if you stay at the camping you don't need to do it).

5 and 6. Audon and Les Barasses, Balazuc. Detailed road map.

How to find the crag:

Those crags, suited near the picturesque village Balazuc, offer nice climbing. A walk to Audon is well worth, the climbing is OK and the village is even more picturesque than Balazuc, enjoy the calm village without any cars and take a lunch at the restaurant.

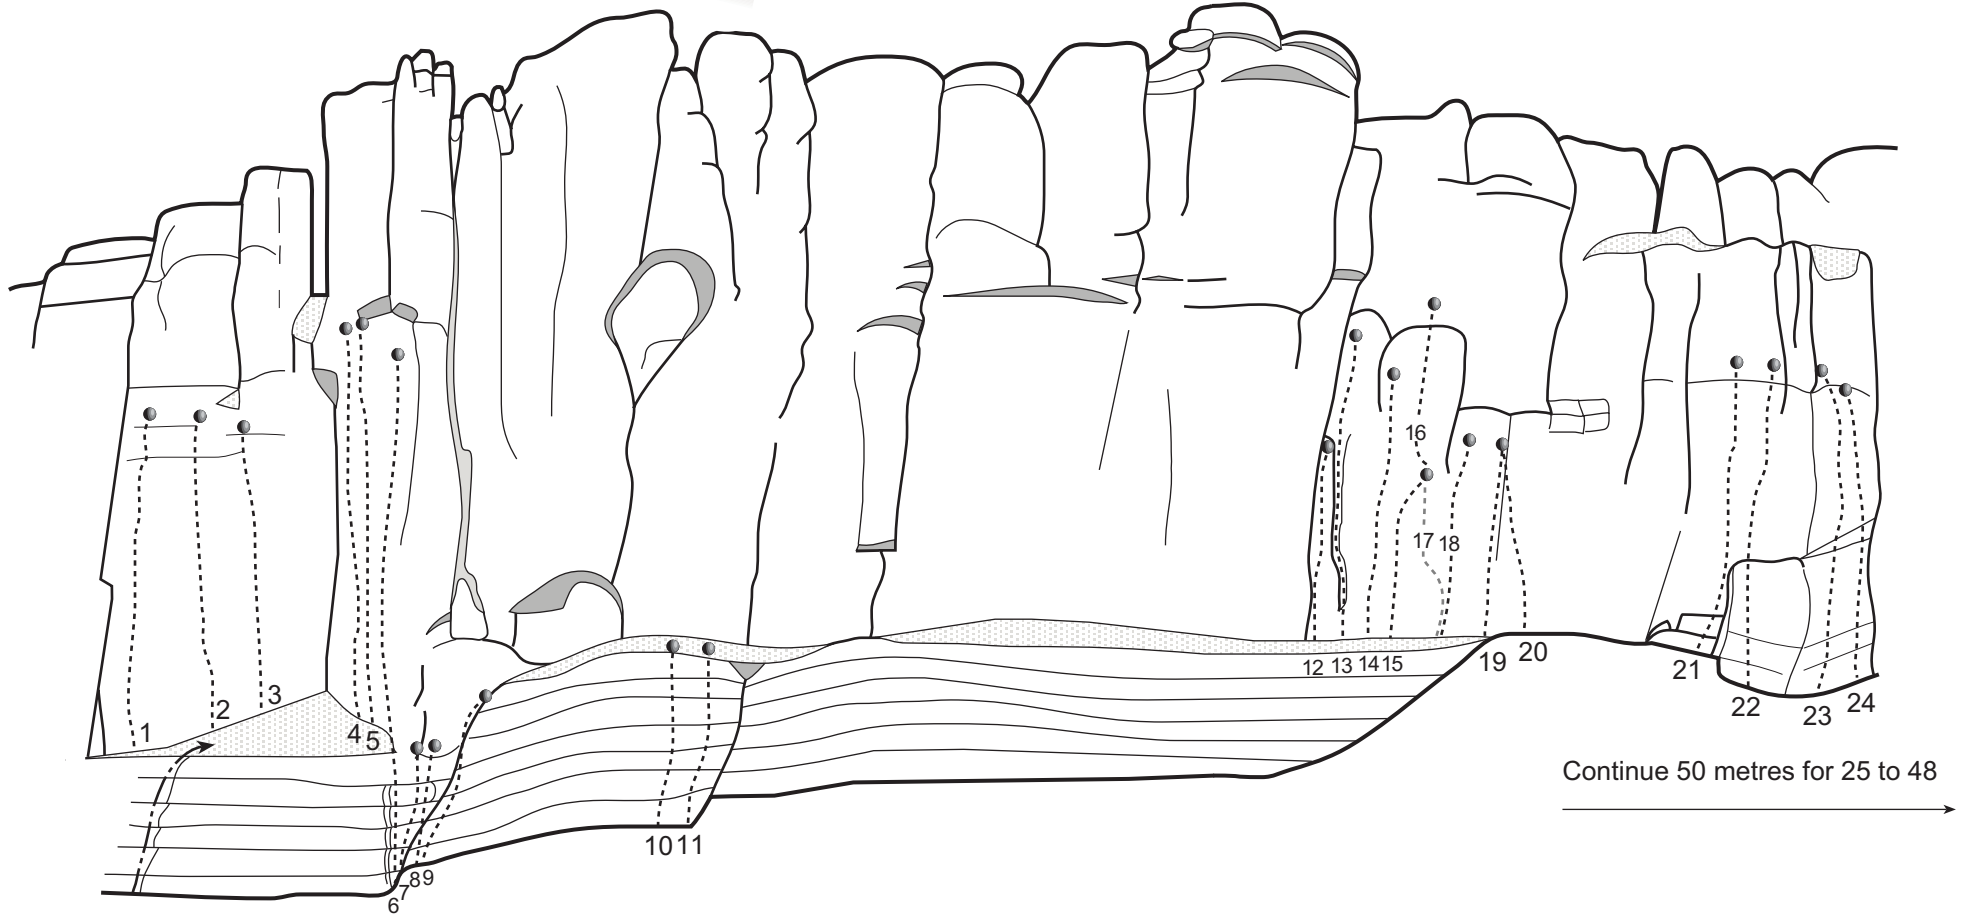

Les Barasses: Drive through Balazuc, over the bridge and park after about 250 metres on a big lay bay on your right.

Follow the track, 2-3 minutes to the crag. Audon: Park as for Les Barasses. Walk back and follow the small road in the direction of Audon. As you reach this little village, pass it, and at the outskirts, when you first stands by the crag above the village, turn right and follow the crag until you reach the routes.

Buoux, France

Few areas have such a historic glamour, and Buoux was in the '80's the centre of universe for the best climbers in the world. Now, local schoolteacher's climb what was almost regarded impossible back then. The compact limestone with distant pockets, technical climbing and a lot of overhangs is tempting climbers from all over the world, but mainly you meet French climbers. Near Marseille and the crowded coast Buoux offers local French climbers an oasis.

Beautiful, though in a gorge (no views as in Céüse), an excellent crag that you might have to get used to before you will enjoy it fully.

Even if Buoux has a reputation built from very good climbers it offers a couple of hundred routes graded from 6a to 6c and could be a perfect choice for a spring or autumn week.

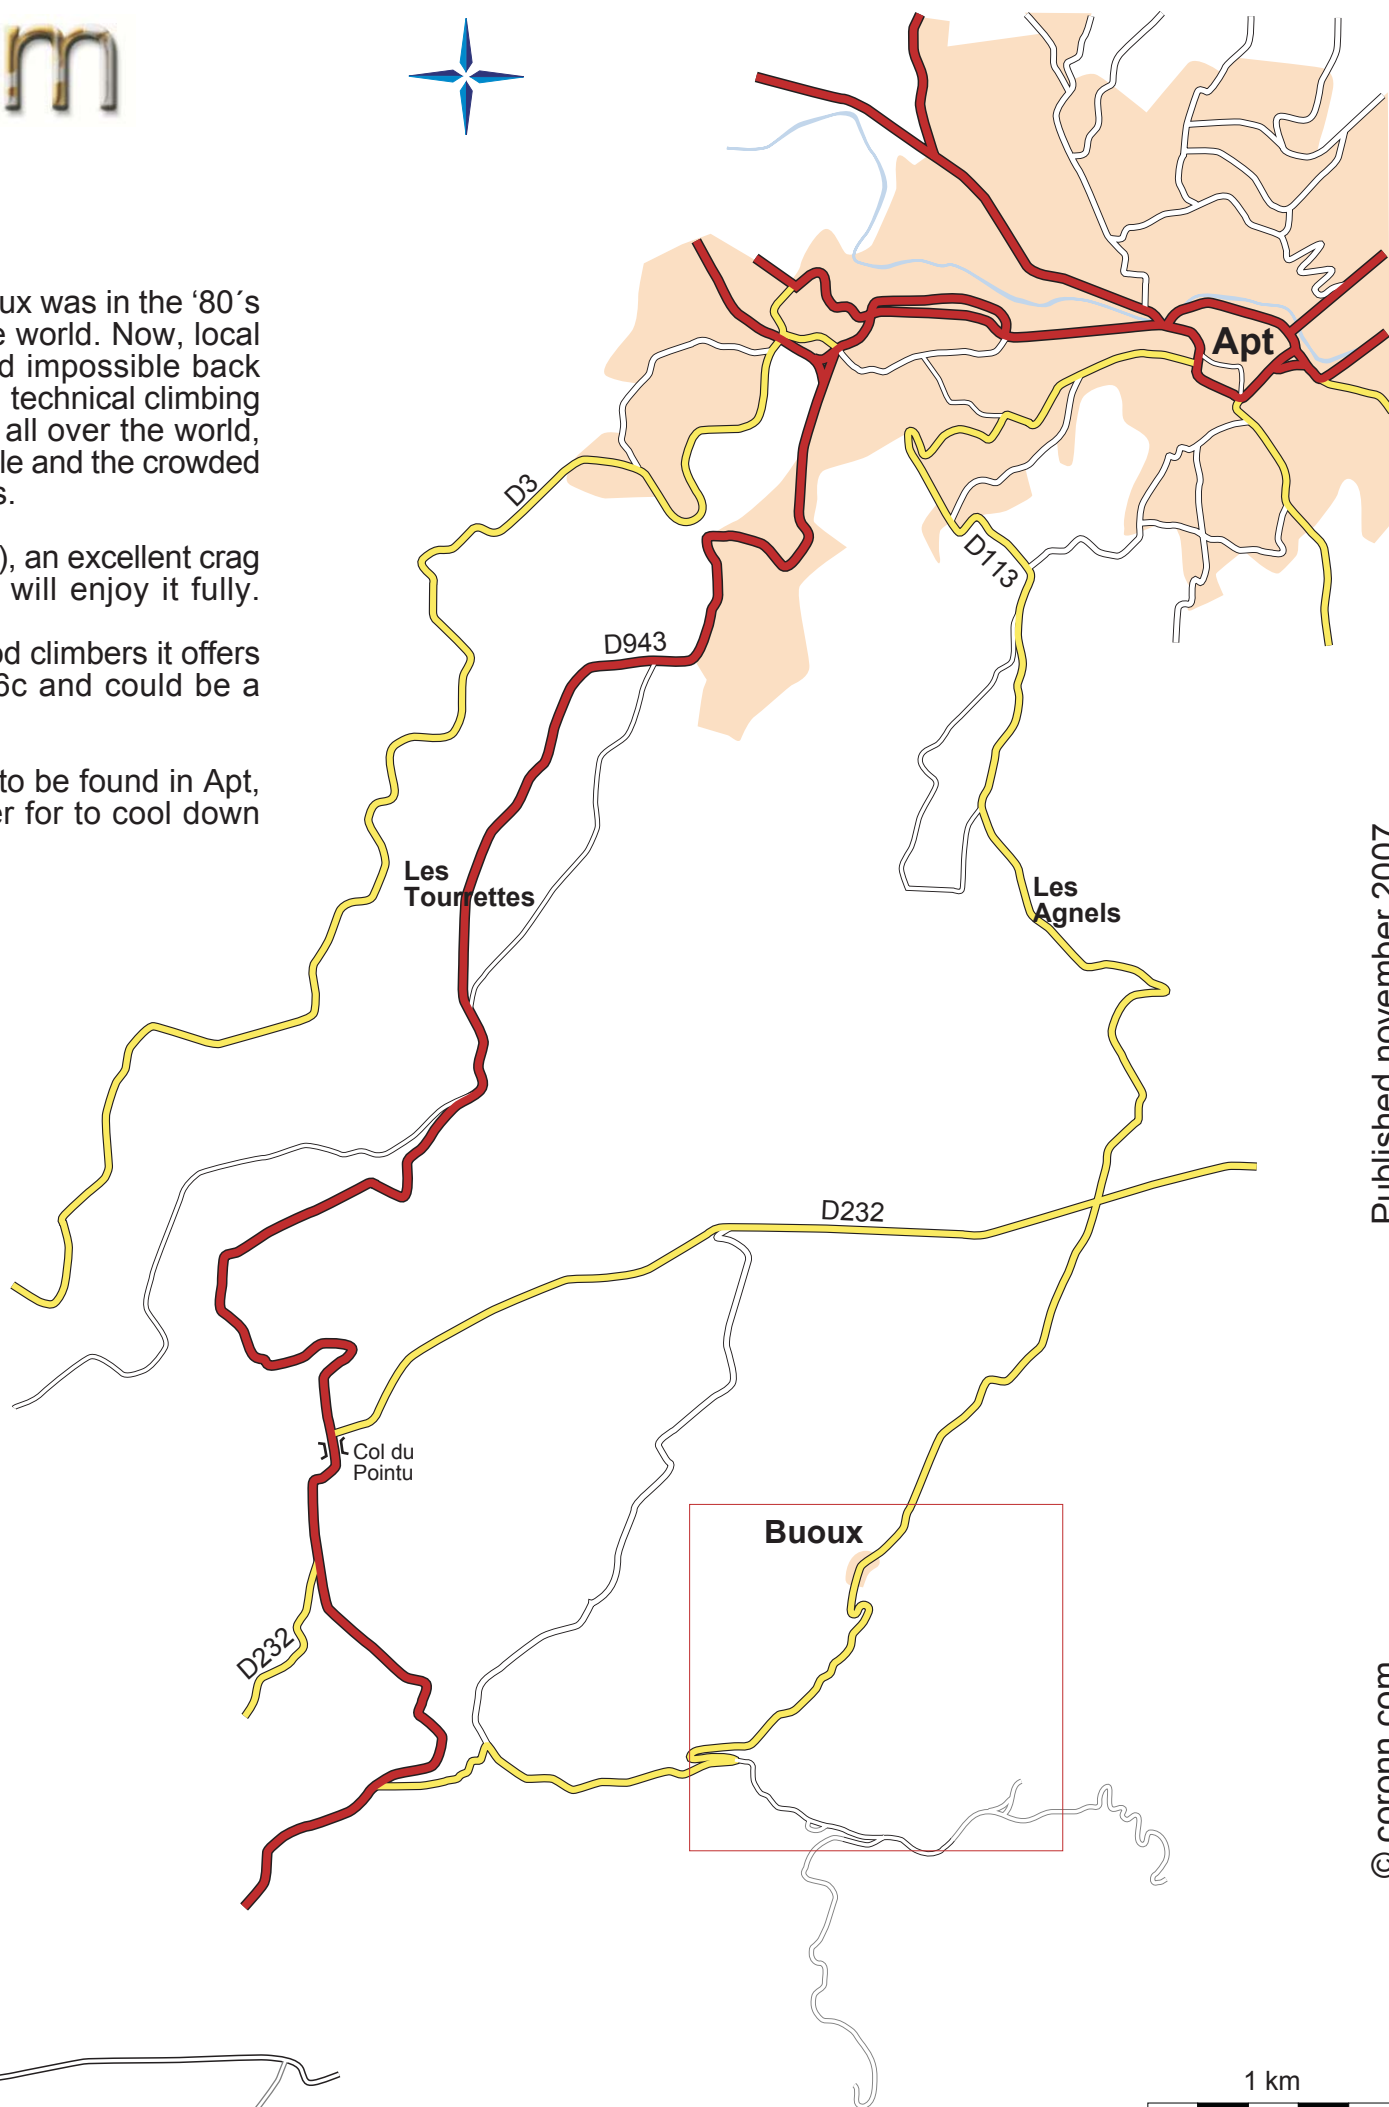

Food, if you don't afford restaurants in Buoux, is to be found in Apt, free camping is forbidden and you will find water for to cool down near the crag.

The summer is to hot for climbing, late spring, winter and autumn is the seasons for Buoux.

On resting days there isn't much to do. Place a visit at the Buoux Fort or drive down to Apt that offers tourist shops, restaurants and bars. It isn't to far for a day on the beach, at least for Swedish visitors.

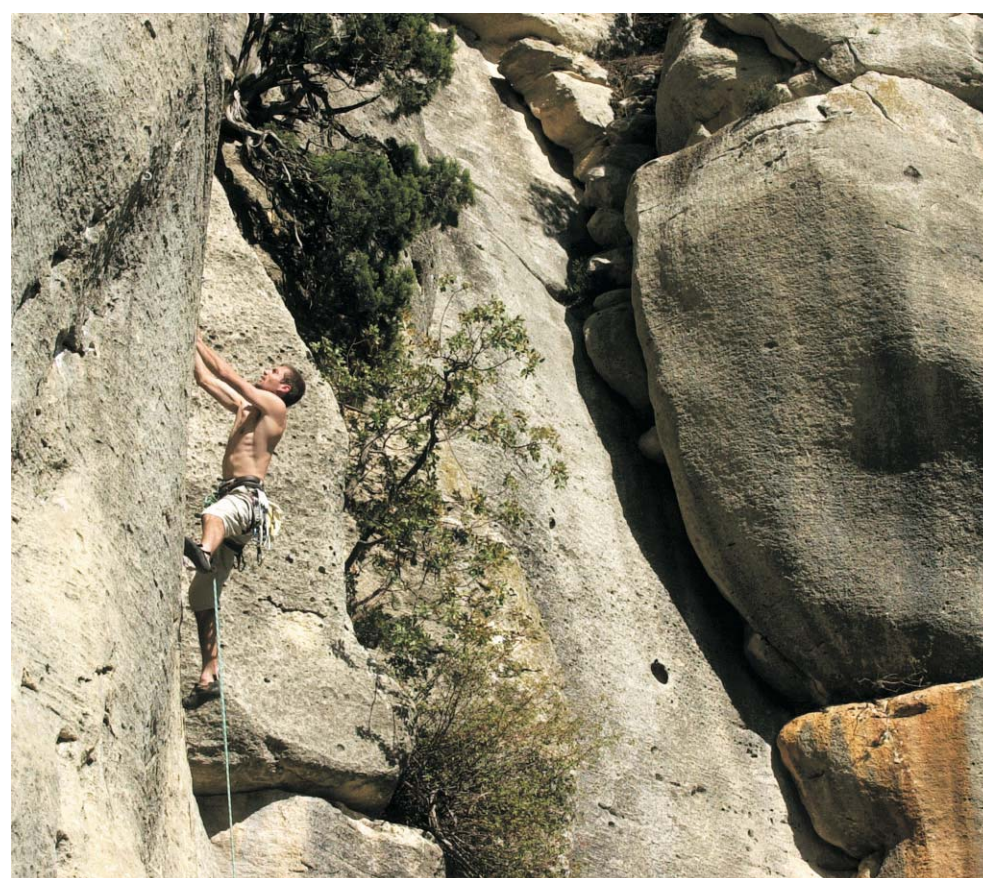

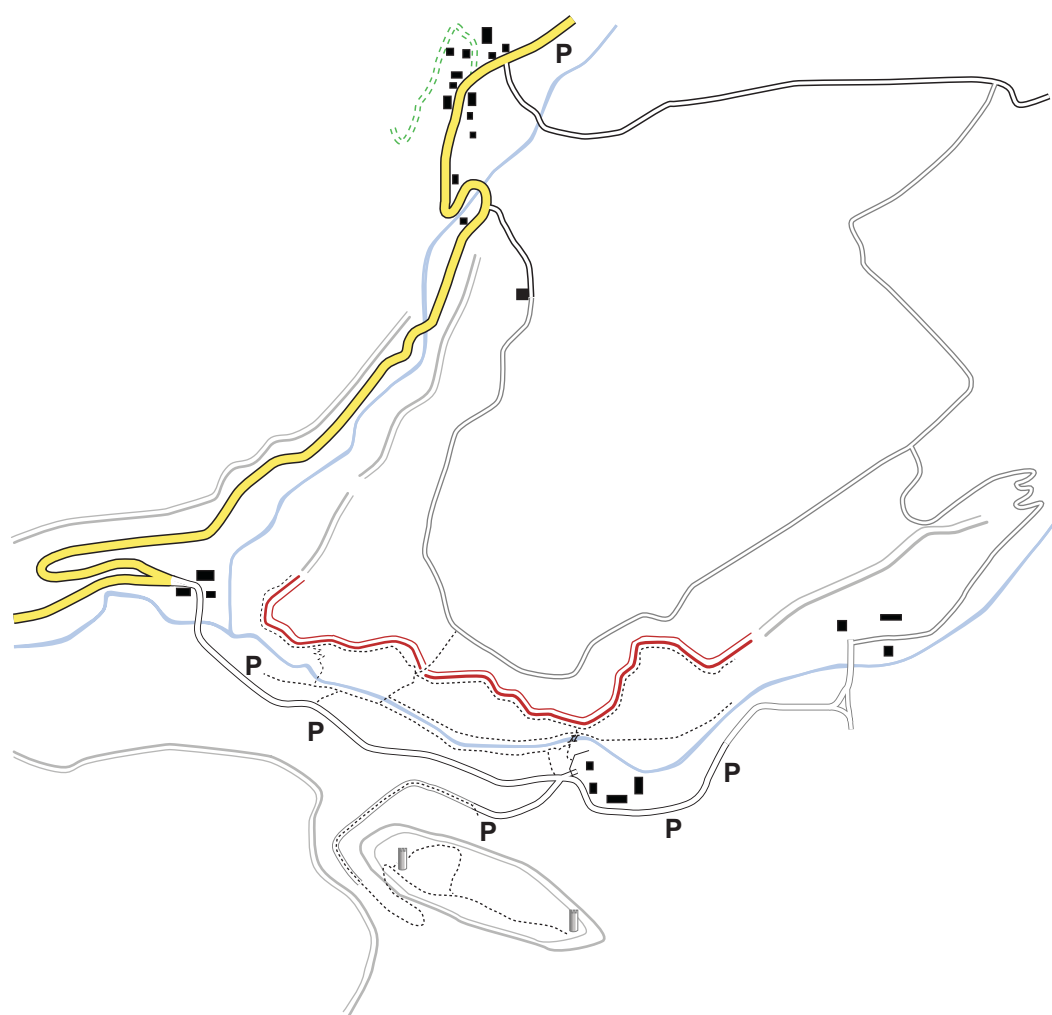

The climbing in Buoux is excellent, and together with Ardèche and Céüse this is one of the best possible rock climbing holidays that Europe can offer.

This map is published as a A3.

Céüse and outlying areas, France

Few areas have such a good reputation, and except from a quite hard approach to the crag in Céüse it is almost perfect. One long crag on an altitude of 1600 metres, a superb view over the landscape in Gapençais and the mountains in the direction of the Italian border. More than 300 routes graded from 5a to 9a+ (major part of the routes 6b to 7c). By the Limestone crag you meet climbers from all over the world, and except a poor night life, a long steep walk to the crag and a trip by car each time you need to buy food the area Céüse is excellent.

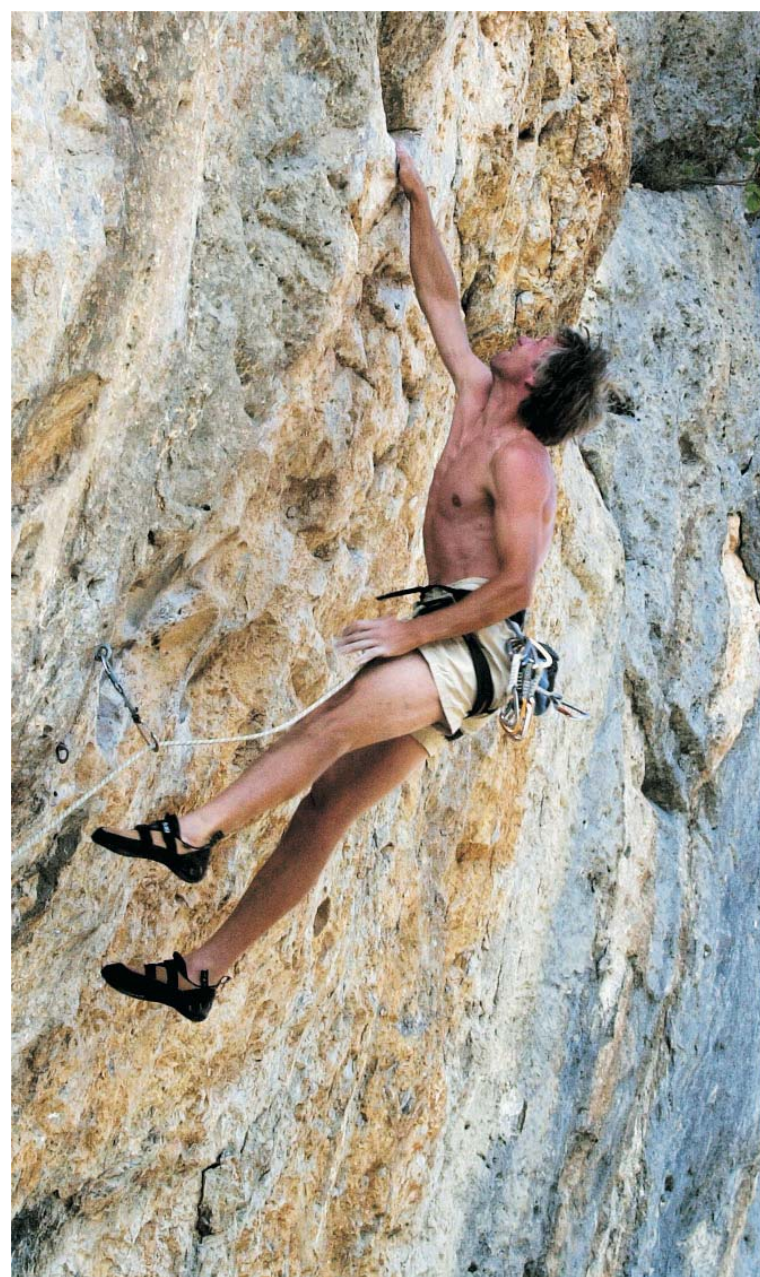

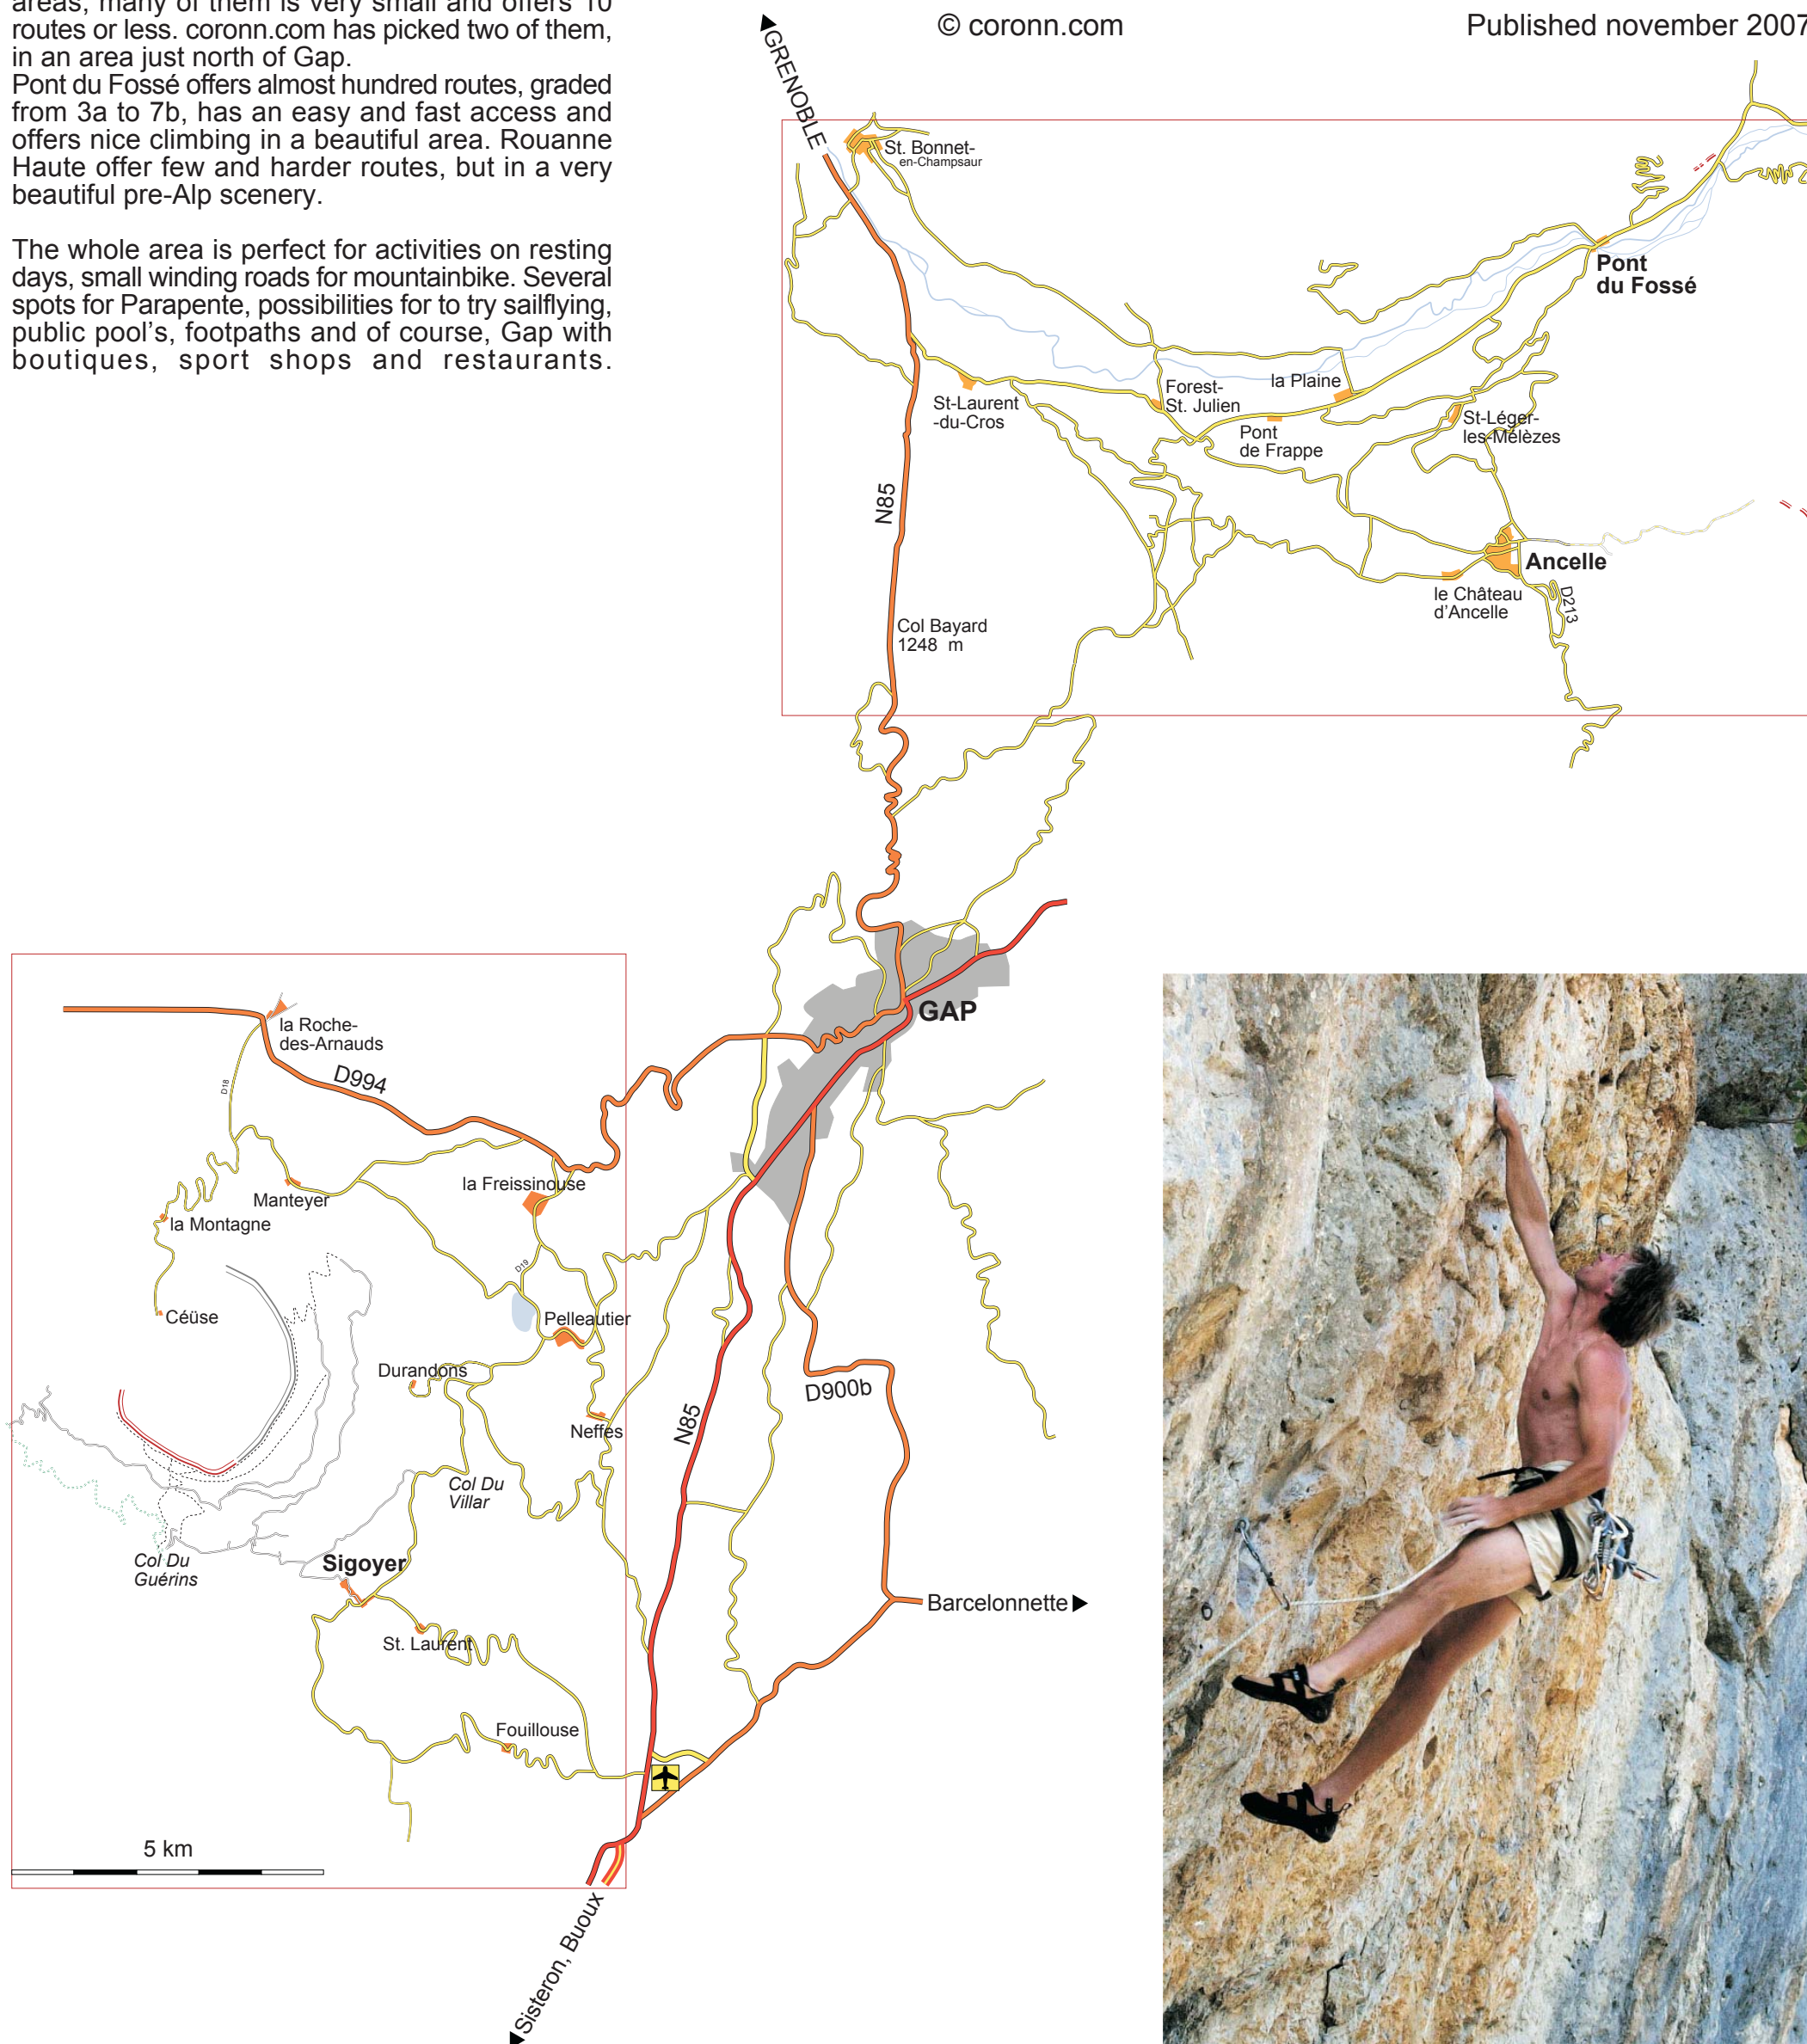

Around the town Gap you can find 20 climbing areas, many of them is very small and offers 10 routes or less. coronn.com has picked two of them, in an area just north of Gap.

Pont du Fossé offers almost hundred routes, graded from 3a to 7b, has an easy and fast access and offers nice climbing in a beautiful area. Rouanne Haute offer few and harder routes, but in a very beautiful pre-Alp scenery.

The whole area is perfect for activities on resting days, small winding roads for mountainbike. Several spots for Parapente, possibilities for to try sailflying, public pool's, footpaths and of course, Gap with boutiques, sport shops and restaurants.

How to find Céüse:

From road N85, coming from Gap or the highroad from Sisteron, turn, follow signpost for Sigoyer. Continue on a smaller road follow signpost for Col Du Guérins. Pass the caping ground and park on a big car park where the road becomes gravelled. You will find water by the car park and almost always by the crag just to the left of sector La cascade. The walk up to the crag is steep, a good idea is to start early before it becomes to hot. The approach by foot takes 45 minutes up to an hour. Follow white/green marks.

How to find the crag:

Coming from Gap, turn right onto a small road, follow signpost for Rouanne. After 500 metres the road becomes gravelled, when the road splits in an Y, hold left. Continue for 4,2 km from Ancelle to the road finish in a big car park. Continue by foot on a small mountain road to the crag, visible from the car park. From the road, scramble up to the crag, there is no track. Approach time about 10 minutes. 6-700 metres before the car park the road runs just by a river and a crag, here you will find some beautiful slab routes, grade unknown.
